Convincing Reasons

Why Co-operative Town Company Stock is the investment on the Washington market today: Because it promises large returns and its value is based on real estate actually owned by the company. Because every dollar invested will be doubled in ing bridges and laying rails to complete this road by August 1.

value by the completion of the Bristol and Elizabeth-

Because the enterprise is no longer an experiment, but a well-established and prosperous business. Because careful and intelligent management is guaranteed by the Board of Directors.

Because the property of the company is located in the richest mineral, timber and agricultural region of Because the stock is sold on monthly installments, and those of moderate means can readily carry it.

Because the company is today making money. Because every lot sale, every rental contract and every deal of any description is made in the interest of the stock. Stock is the point to which every profit converges and upon which every dividend turns.

PINKERTONS LEAVE PITTSBURG.

Stories Told by Some of Their Number.

FRICK IS DETERMINED.

Special Dispatch to The Evening Star.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., July 7.—Responsibility for the lives which were sacrificed yesterday must rest upon the shoulders of those who injected the Pinkerton men into the situation, and as the business of the Carnegie Company is entirely in the hands of Henry Clay Frick, chairman of the corporation, it would seem as though he must bear the burden. Whether this be so or not Mr. Frick is not at all disturbed. He insists that he will secure possession of the mill no matter how many lives are sacrificed or how much money is spent. All efforts to bring about a conference between him and the Amalgamated Association have failed completely just because he declines to converse upon the subject. He has had more than a little experience in such business, and has invariably been victorious. A year ago he had a terrific struggle with 40,000 striking Hungarians in the coke regions and

Right or wrong there is an undoubted and strong sentiment among the mill proprietors and managers against any unnecessary intervention between Frick and his rebellious operatives. The "bosses" are satisfied that he will come out on top and if he does they will rejoice with him. The blow will be a serious one for the "Amalgamated." For ten years the workmen, through this organization, have upheld their scale and have done it by conservative methods, so it is not unnatural that the big manufacturing combination should desire its disintegration. Of all the prominent men in Pittsburg who might interest themselves in behalf of permanent peace Chris McGee stands alone. He has done and is doing his utmost to bring about harmony, but so far without result.

TRANSFORMATION OF THE TOWN. More thorough transformation could not be imagined than that which the events of a day have worked in the people of Homestead. The reputation of the place for good order and lawtrouble arose, and it is safe to say that the trouble might have been adjusted with honor and without bloodshed had President Frick retrouble might have been adjusted with honor and without bloodshed had President Frick refrained from attempting to support his claim through the medium of the Pinkerton police. But the bloodshed seems to have warped the judgment and eradicated the better nature of these previously estimable people of Homestead, perhaps a natural but nevertheless a deplorable sequence. They have suffered the loss of friends and kinsfolk, and for hours have been thirsting, with a longing that seems unquenchable, for opportunity to slaughter those who came, as these people say. "Hired by greedy capital to murder protesting labor."

What little of revenge was enjoyed yesterday seems to have had no satisfying effect upon the changed natures of thousands who, two or three days ago, would have shuddered at the intimation.

Then followed a scene of sickening barbarism. pelted the unfortunates with dirt.

It is something to the credit of the strikers that several of the more prominent among them did their utmost to compel a cessation of the brutality, but in most instances without avail. They had to deal with an element that had been absent while there was personal danger, the toughs who always hang around until they have an opportunity to do mischief with safety to themselves. It was these, aided and abetted by the screaming and uncontrolable females, who pounded the helpiess ones to the earth and then jumped on the prostrate bodies

Later in the day, as the prisoners were being marched to the railway on their way to Pittsburg, the disorder and the wholesale assaults were renewed, the women, as on the previous occasion, being in the forefront. Very vigorous were the efforts of the strikers to avert the insults and cowardly mutilation which their charges suffered, and in a measure they were successful. For a time there was pandemonium. The pleadings of the guards and the protests of some of the men who had been most active during the battles of the day, the vicious and bloodyminded mob made a rush on the almost frantic Pinkertons. Bones were crushed beneath the blows of heavy clubs, and while the senseless victims lay prostrate scores of fiendish vixens tore their clothing, scratched their faces and Chairman Frick insists upon having possession of the mill, and it will take at least a least a strikers think it exceedingly improbable that the firm could get more men just now for guard duty. It is certain that this morning many homes in Homestead are areasonals, for the men captured 500 rifles in the barges, and they know how to use them, too, and will do so if other men are brought here. They do not look upon this as a decisive contest and expect other battles.

TAKING THE PRISONERS AWAY. of the Pinkertons to Pittsburg. It was about midnight when a special train on the Pittsburg, Virginia and Charleston railway brought up six empty coaches and a deputy sheriff. President Weihe and President-elect Mail Garland had been looking for the train, they were anxiously expecting it, for the keeping of the guards here another day would have been dangerous. When the train arrived about 100 men had gathered about the rink. Infide the Pinkertons were in deadly fear of another outbreak, and possibly of lynching. Their fear increased when about forty of the sturdiest steel workers entered the hall.

but it was quiet. A leader of the men came out and said:

"Boys, we are going to send the Pinkertons away. Many claim they were deceived in coming here. They are all hurt and crippled, many dangerously. Do not repeat the scenes of this afternoon. I want to hit from the shoulder here. None of the men who went to the front hit unarmed people from the rear as cowards did this afternoon."

A voice from the crowd—"That's right. We'll protect them."

President Weihe made a speech in a similar strain and asked assistance for the crippled guards. This was offered. The guards came out, pale and apprehensive, but not one was molested on his way to the train. Then, as it pulled out, three hearty cheers were given and the crowd dispersed. After that Homestead went asleep until this morning.
